Goodbye April. You brought your showers with you.

The A. B. C. mediators are at work, but haven't yet got down to W. and V.

Georgetown's big spring, which rises in the town, is not the boasted water supply it was before a town was built around it. The water now has to be sterilized before it is fit for use.

Mexico is too good a country to be ruled and ruined by bandits. It needs to be taken over and given a good stable government. Porto Rico is prosperous and her people are happy and contented. The stars and stripes should never be lowered at Vera Cruz.

The Kentuckian has another sketch of a leading business man in to-day's paper. These sketches will be permanent feature in the future and will appear on the same page in every issue. The object is to let the public know something about the men who are making Greater Hopkinsville. Read the articles and put them in your scrap-book. They will be well worth preserving for the historical data they will contain.

JOE C. ADCOCK MUSTERED OUT

Followed Stonewall Jackson In The Famous Valley Campaign.

WAS WOUNDED AT CEDAR RUN

Buried Yesterday In The Uniform He Loved--Tribute
By a Comrade.

Joseph C. Adecock died at his home near Church Hill, Tuesday evening, in the 73rd year of his age. For many months he had been slowly dying of cancer of the stomach, but held on to life with the same grim determination with which he followed the Lost Cause 50 years ago. The old veteran was one of Jackson's men and for four years belonged to the flower of the army of Virginia.

He was born in Buckingham county, Va., Jan 1, 1842. With the first call for volunteers in 1861, he enlisted in Company E, 21st Va. Infantry, and fought under Stonewall Jackson. He took part in the battle of Seven Pines, was at Bull Run, and in all the fierce conflicts in which the army of Virginia covered itself with glory. He was wounded at Cedar Run, but returned to duty as soon as he was able and fought throughout the war and was in the finish around Richmond. He was married Aug. 12, 1864, while on a leave of absence. In 1870 he came to this county and engaged in farming near the Striped Bridge and had ever since made this his home. His wife survives him and the following sons and daughters: Mrs. Willie Wooldridge, Mrs. Sue Cravens and Mrs. Edna Butler and Thomas A., James F., and Sam J. Adecock, most of whom live in this city.

He was one of the most enthusiastic Confederate veterans in the country and loved to attend the annual reunions. Above all things he prized the Cross of Honor presented by the Daughters of the Confederacy. He was a member of the Hebron Methodist church and was faithful in all his relations to his church and had the good will and respect of all who knew him and appreciated his nobility of character. The funeral services were held at his late residence yesterday afternoon and the interment was in Riverside Cemetery.

TRIBUTE BY A COMRADE.

Mr. J. C. Adecock died at his home near Church Hill, on the evening of April 28th, after a lingering illness incident to age. Mr. Adecock was born and reared in Buckingham county, Va. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, having enlisted early in the war in Company E, 21st Va. Regiment. This regiment was assigned to the "Stonewall" Brigade, which was named in honor of that great soldier "Stonewall" Jackson. Mr. Adecock participated in most of the battles around Richmond. He was also in the Valley campaign, at Winchester and at Cedar Run, where he received a wound through the hip that disabled him for service for many months. When sufficiently recovered he was assigned to hospital duty at Richmond.

Mr. Adecock was a man of kind and gentle disposition, with no bitterness in his heart, even towards those who opposed him, testifying to the beautiful sentiment expressed at the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, where there was "No north, no south, but a country with peace and love for all mankind and a brotherly greeting of the blue and gray." He was laid to rest in his Confederate uniform of Gray, which he wore with so much pride. Farewell, Joe, and as your spirit crosses that fathomless chasm, may you be greeted by comrades who have gone before. Again, farewell.

MINE HORROR EXPLOSION

Traps 266 Miners and Only
59 Have Been Rescued
Alive.

MINE BURNING FIERCELY.

Fire Damp Cause of the Explosion 600 Feet Below Surface.

Eccles, W. Va., April 29. — Four miners are known to be dead, fifty-nine were rescued, many of them severely burned, and 203 others are entombed in two burning mines, and are believed to have but a small chance for their lives, as the result of an explosion of gas in mines No. 5 and 6 of the New River Collieries company here yesterday. The dead and rescued men were taken from mine No. 6, and it is said all but thirteen who entered this shaft have been accounted for. One hundred and ninety of the entombed men are in shaft No. 5, not a man having escaped from this operation since the explosion. The mine tonight was burning fiercely, with government, state and volunteer rescuers working desperately to subdue the flames.

The depth of the two main shafts is six hundred feet, and the mines are connected underground. There are two other shafts into the mines, but the explosion totally wrecked the three out of the four. The long entrance leads into mine No. 6, and by means of it the rescues were made. Number 5 mine apparently is completely shut off from the surface, and rescuers hold out little hope of reaching the large number of men in time to save them.

The explosion occurred in mine No. 5.

SPECIAL TRAIN GOING SOUTH

Carrying Big Redpath Chautauqua Party to South Carolina.

A Special Redpath Chautauqua train passed Hopkinsville over the L & N. road early Tuesday morning, carrying about eighty people, enroute to Charleston, S. C. A stop was made here and stops were also made at Murfreesboro, Tullahoma, Springfield, Cleveland and Morrisville, in all of which places Redpath Chautauquas will be held later.

A year ago the Redpath Chautauqua special train started a month later than this year and its Southern destination was Albany, Ga.

On the special train of this year was Bohumir Kryl and his band. The Cathedral Choir, former U. S. Senator Frank J. Cannon and many others.

The past year's growth of the Chautauqua movement in the United States has been little less than marvelous. The number of tent Chautauquas in this country has increased from 1,500 last year to more than 2,200 this summer. One thousand of these Chautauquas are under Redpath management. There are about 300 more Redpath Chautauquas this year than last.

Never before in a year has such wide publicity been given the name Chautauqua in the press of the country. This in part, of course, was due to the wide discussion of Mr. Bryan's appearances on the Chautauqua platform last summer.

The army of people now employed in all the different features of Chautauqua work over the wide expanse of the American continent also serves to emphasize the movement's im-

DR. CAMPBELL TO LEXINGTON

terday After Several Years' Service.

Dr. D. A. Campbell, assistant physician at the Western Hospital, has been transferred to the Eastern Hospital and left yesterday for Lexington to assume his new duties. Dr. Campbell has been a popular and efficient official and has made many friends during his service of several years here, to whom his departure is a source of regret. Dr. Sanders, a member of the State Senate, was appointed to succeed Dr. Campbell, but there is said to be some doubt about his acceptance. His family consists of a wife and six children and it is reported that the Board stipulates that not more than four of the children take up quarters in the Hospital and it is said Dr. Sanders may decline rather than divide his family. It is not known at this writing whether or not he will come.

OWLS HAD GREAT TIME

Banquet Tuesday Night Proved Birds Very Much Alive.

MANY GUESTS PRESENT

Hon. D. H. Kincheloe Delivered
Splendid Address On Fraternallism.

The first social gathering of the Owls Tuesday night was a great success from every view-point. The festivities continued up to a late hour and the occasion was one that will live long in the memory of those present.

The nest in Odd Fellows' Hall was filled with members of the Order and their families and a large number of specially invited guests, among them Hon. D. H. Kincheloe, of Madisonville, one of the most eloquent orators of the State. Mr. Kincheloe was the speaker of the evening and his address was an inspiration to his hearers.

Civil government under national law was established Tuesday in Vera Cruz, with a Chicago man as Civil Governor.

Smallpox was discovered Tuesday among the refugees on the Cyclops just as they were disembarking at Galveston.

The division of troops now on the Mexican border is prepared to take the field at five minutes' notice, fully equipped for a long and severe campaign, according to Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing, who took over Tuesday the command of the United States forces gathered at El Paso.

Mr. A. M. Wallis preceded Mr. Kincheloe in a short speech, in which he clearly explained the aims of the order and the many good things it stands for and the kind of citizenship that is invited to become members.

Mr. Joe E. Moseley was master of ceremonies and he measured up fully to the demands of the occasion, seeming as much in his element as when he is taking a part in a political meeting.

The entire program was replete with good things. Miss Mae Roper's solo, "Let Me Whisper to Your Heart," was beautifully rendered, her voice showing good carrying power as well as sweetness. The reading of Miss Virginia Pursley took a strong hold on her hearers and for one of her years she is quite proficient in negro dialect. Mrs. N. H. Fentress, who was on the program for a solo, chose as her number "The Holy City," and she made a most decided hit.

The other musical members of the program were filled with the orchestra of the Odd Fellows Lodge and the quartette of the Woodmen of the World. It is needless to say that those gentlemen well sustained their reputation for entertaining lovers of both vocal and instrumental music.

When Mr. Moseley announced that the crowd would find out "What Owls Eat" by going down stairs to the banquet room there was a prompt movement in that direction and a magnificent feast, prepared by the wives and daughters of the Owls, was enjoyed to the fullest extent.

American Consul Hostetter has telegraphed the state department that Generals Obregon and Alvaro of the Mexican constitutionalists, had notified their forces in the state of Sonora that any demonstrations against Americans and seditious speeches would likely lead to hanging.

No trace of Mexican soldiers in the country surrounding Vera Cruz was observed by navy aviators who engaged in scout work over the city and environs according to dispatches from Admiral Badger to the navy department. Admiral Mayo reported that the Tampico district is practically clear of Americans.

Mexicans around the city of Vera Cruz are said to be flocking into the city with baskets on their arms under the impression that the Americans are feeding all who apply. It took them less than a week to get tame enough to eat out of the hands of the hated invaders. These are the people who are tired of revolutions in Mexico.

Secretary Bryan says he has no advices that any Americans have been killed by Mexican federales in two weeks, in spite of rumors to the contrary. Many have been detained, but these are being released as fast as possible and are being gotten out of the country.

Finding no constitutional objection to a law making saloonkeepers liable for damages resulting from their sale of liquor, the supreme court of the U. S. dismissed the appeal of Louis W. Prentiss, a saloonist of Nebraska City, Neb., from a judgment of the Nebraska courts holding him liable in the sum of $6,000 to Mrs. May Bulger for her husband becoming an habitual drunkard.

MADE UP OF SMALL THINGS

Even the Most Insignificant Words and Acts May Be Productive of Joy or the Reverse.

A wild bird's song is a little thing lost in the depths of a frowning sky. And yet as it falls on a listening ear and leaves its message of melody, earth's green seems brighter and life is sweeter, all through an autumn day.

The coo of a babe is a little thing—meaningless sound from a vacant mind.

But 'tis the only sound that all nations heed; the one clear language all races know.

A mother's love is a little thing—too soon, alas, forgot.

But it typifies to blind humankind the love and trust and hope divine that bear with patience calm and sweet the wilful wrongs in these lives of ours.

A passing smile is a little thing—lost in a world of toil and care.

And yet the soul with gloom oppressed and the life grown wearied with burdens hard will happier be in the afterglow of a smile that is warmly kind.

A kindly word is a little thing—a breath that goes and a sound that dies.

But the heart that gives and the heart that bears may know that it sings and sings and sings till at last it blends with the wild bird's song, and the coo of babes in what men call the celestial choir.—Utica Saturday Globe.

MARCH STRAIGHT TO THE SEA

No Obstacle Able to Make Army of West Indian Crabs Swerve From Its Course.

In the rivers and fresh-water streams of the West Indian mountains are quantities of crabs that scuttle away when anyone comes near, just like any ordinary crabs. But, as crabs go, these are very queer crabs indeed.

When an American lady crab wishes to lay her eggs, she lays them without more ado and keeps them attached to her body until they are hatched. But not so her West Indian cousin. She lives in the mountains, but she feels that she must lay her eggs in the sand of the seashore. Nowhere else will do.

So, once a year, all the West Indian crabs gather in a great army, which sometimes stretches 40 yards wide and more than a mile long. Then they set out for the sea, the males leading and the females behind.

Nothing can turn this fierce little army from its course. If a house stands in its way, or a wall, or a cliff, over it goes. Sometimes hundreds of crabs are killed in their tracks, but the host keeps straight on, turning neither to the right nor to the left.

When the army arrives upon the seashore, the females settle down contentedly in the sand and deposit their eggs. And when the laying season is over, the old crabs turn around and march serenely home.

Made Government See Point.

Lieutenant Waghorn found it difficult to convince the British postoffice of the value of the Isthmus of Suez as a means of shortening the letter route to India. He guaranteed to transmit a bag of letters to India and return with others to England in the same time that it then took the letters to go.

He was granted permission to make the attempt, and difficulties at once cropped up. Cost at Port Said was $30 a ton, at Suez $100, so he loaded camels with coal and took them across the Isthmus. When he reached Suez with the letters the steamer which he had arranged to meet him was not there. This difficulty he surmounted by chartering an open Arab boat and forcing the crew at the pistol point to take him the 600 miles down the Red sea to Jeddah, where he found a steamer to take him to Bombay, and the return journey he completed well within the time. Thenceforward the Isthmus route became the overland route, for Waghorn was able to convince the Arabs that the protection of the mails was better than looting them, English gold being his strongest argument.

Nettles Proof of Man's Presence.

Nettles are said to be an almost certain proof that man has lived on the spot. One British species, the so-called Roman nettle, is said to be found only where the Romans have been.

Coles, the seventeenth century herbalist, explains: "It grows both at the town of Lide, by Romney, and in the streets of the town of Romney, in Kent, where Julius Caesar landed with his soldiers and abode there a certain time; and for the growing of it in that place it is reported that the soldiers brought some of the seeds with them and sowed it there, for their use to rub and chafe their limbs, when through extreme cold they should be stiff and benumbed; being told before they came from home that the climate of Britain was so extreme cold it was not to be endured without some friction."

In Love With Living.

"It is better to lose health like a spendthrift," said Robert Louis Stevenson, "than to waste it like a miser." Stevenson took care of his health, of his body. But he did not hoard his health. He did not make it the dominant thought with him. "The joy of living" was with him the great thing. "We do not," he said, having in mind normal men and women, "we do not, properly speaking, love life at all, but living."

A Strange Story.

Argyle, Mich.—Mrs. Wm. H. Carson, in a letter from Argyle, says: "I was almost wild with pain in my head, and other severe pains, due to womanly troubles. Cardui gave me great relief at once. Further use of Cardui raised me from my bed of agony. Cardui saved my life, and I can't be thankful enough for what it did for me." Whether seriously sick, or simply ailing, take Cardui, the woman's tonic. As a general tonic for women, to improve the appetite and build up the constitution, Cardui is in a class by itself. Those who have used it say it does the work; it relieves, it cures. Try it. Your druggist has it.

CAT AS A SNAKE CHARMER

Pusey's Fascination of Deadly Serpent Proved But Not Absolutely Accounted For.

Stories of fascination by snakes are common, but from India comes the opposite in an account of how a cat may exercise such hypnotic power over a deadly serpent as to deprive it of all power of action.

A gentleman who has lived forty-six years, as he says, in India, relates to a writer in the Field that twice his life has been saved by a cat. On one occasion, he says, he walked on to the veranda of his house and actually trod on a cobra that was sitting up ready to strike. Expecting every instant to feel its fangs, he wondered at the delay in the deadly stroke, when, glancing behind him, he saw his cat crouching and gazing intently at the reptile with a mesmeric effect, which seemed to render it unable to move, so that he killed it easily.

Another time, when sleeping in a cot in this veranda, he awoke to find on one side of the bed a huge cobra, with head erect, and on the other side his cat, its glistening green eyes blazing at the snake. The man crawled out of his covering, got a gun, and even poked at the cobra, which had remained as immovable as a stuffed specimen. Wishing to test the phenomenon, he placed his hand in front of the eyes of the cat, whereupon the snake immediately showed signs of life and activity, but when the hand was removed, fell instantly into mesmeric fixity of attitude. Then it was killed.

Granting the facts, how much was the effect upon the snake due to hypnotism, and how much to paralyzing fear of an ancient enemy, rendering it forgetful of everything else in its intense watchfulness of a recognized danger?

FORCED TO HEAR SERMON

No One Was Allowed to "Take a Few Winks" in English Churches 300 Years Ago.

Those who have a habit of sleeping through the minister's sermon should thank their stars that they were not living in England 300 years ago, for they would have been rapped over the head every time they dozed by men especially appointed to the task of keeping the congregation awake.

For instance, in one parish in Shropshire, 25 shillings a year was regularly paid to a poor man to go about the church during the sermon and keep the people awake. He carried a thin, long wand in his hand, which he could conveniently stretch out over considerable space and rap offenders on the head or about the shoulders.

With women he was always instructed to be gentler, to tap softly, but persistently, until the slumber was broken. For women, it was learned, were not so amiable as men on being aroused from a comfortable nap, and, if gentle means were not employed, were likely to get up and leave, causing no little commotion about them.

Wisdom of the Ancients.

It is now believed that the ancients used telescopes for astronomical purposes. In excavations in Babylon a lens has been found which was undoubtedly used in a telescope centuries before the birth of Christ. The ancients, both Chaldean and Egyptian, were acquainted with the planetary system, knew that the earth was round, could calculate meridians exactly, calculate the orbits of the planets; in fact, paid great attention to eclipses of the sun and moon, to occultations of the planets, to the motions of the planets, and the determination of their periodic and synodic times, to the construction of tables of the fixed stars and the mapping of them into constellations and to settling the exact length of the true solar year. It is fair to presume, then, that they had telescopes to aid them in their work.

Oldtime Criminal Trials.

Criminal trials used to be conducted with wonderful speed in London, especially after the court had dined. An old observer of the ways of the central criminal court cites a case in which a prisoner had picked a pocket of a handkerchief. Two witnesses were called, the man robbed and a constable, who stated the facts in a few words. Then the judge addressed the prisoner, "Nothing to say, I suppose?" The snarling up was as follows: "Gentlemen, I suppose you have no doubt? I have none." Jury—Gilty, my lord." Judge to prisoner: "We have met before—we shall not meet again for some time—seven years' transportation." Time of trial, two minutes fifty-three seconds. It was said that these after dinner trials did not average more than four minutes each.

Sign in the Snowstorm.

Walking from Hope to Hayfield by a path over the moors, writes a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, I found the hills covered with snow.

A freezing east wind made things anything but pleasant. At one point I had to admit that I had lost my way, and it was with relief that I found a signpost. The inscription was blotted out with frozen snow.

I climbed the post, and with great difficulty and personal discomfort thawed the snow off with my already half frozen hand, and succeeded in deciphering the inscription. It said: "Keep to the path."—London Globe.

Life Need Not Be Narrow.
Our life is just as narrow as we let it be. If we live in a lonely country place miles from a railway, we can study the plants and animals about us until we come to understand something of the secrets of the universe. If our lot is in a great city, we have opportunities of studying human nature—seeing with our own eyes the development of characters as strange as ever novelist put into his books. Multitudes of men walked the same streets with Dickens without seeing a hundredth part of what he saw. It is the power to see, and not the object to be seen, that we lack, and this power may be, to a certain extent, cultivated by practice.—Exchange.

Forget to Collect Their Money.

The British government every year reaps a huge profit from the people who forget their own government stock when dividends fall due. The fault rests entirely with the stockholders for they even forget to give their addresses, so that they can be notified that money awaits them in the government coffers. In this case, about $5,000,000 is passed on to the national debt commission, and in turn it receives the interest from this money.

Flowers Used as Food.

It is not a matter of common knowledge that in a great many countries nearly all the flowers are used as articles of food. We sometimes use nasturtiums in salads, but we would hardly think of growing lillies for the mere purpose of boiling them down to make a dish resembling spinach.

WANT THE BRAND-NEW GOLD VARIED METHODS OF DANCING

Manufacturers of Trinkets From the Precious Metal Seek That Which is Fresh From the Mint.

An article in which Santa Claus deals heavily in gold thimbles. Philadelphia supplies an enormous number of them, one manufacturer being especially prominent. That city is also a wedding ring producing center. The ladies who wear the thimbles and the brides who get the rings may be interested in knowing that large numbers of them are made from brand-new gold coins. The manufacturer does not want an old gold coin, because there is an appreciable difference in the amount of metal in a new and an old $10 gold piece. So the ring and thimble maker, knowing the value of what appears to be trifles, takes his cheek or his paper money to a bank and gets in exchange the newest of new gold money. No gold has been worn off these coins in the handling.

The money is melted, and that's where the thimbles and the rings come from, or at least a good many of them. There seems to be an impression that one may not destroy United States money, but that is an error. It is unlawful to mutilate a coin, but you commit no crime when you utterly destroy either paper money or metal currency. There is no law to prevent the old stunt of lighting a cigarette with a $10 bill-noise, except the law of common sense. The man who burns the money is the only loser. If a bank were accidentally to destroy some paper money, it might have it replaced with new notes upon presentation to the United States treasury of proof that the old money had really disappeared.

CAN DO WITHOUT ALBUMEN

Not Necessary to Plant Life, but Its Absence Means That Growth Will Not Be Natural.

That nihumen, the nourishing matter stored in the seeds of many plants, is not essential to the development of the seed, has been shown by experiments in making seeds germinate after they have been deprived of their albumen. By this "starving" process queer vegetable specimens have been obtained, many of them dwarfed or deformed, but it has proved that vegetable matter may attain growth without being nourished by albumen.

It is believed now that albumen is only a reserve food intended to sustain the young plant until it has become strong enough to seek its own food. If put to the test the young plant can dispense with this reserve food, but not without suffering from the privation.

These researches go to prove the possibility of creating monstrous plants at will. In the same way Camille Daresie produced at will deformed chickens by interfering with the normal evolution of the egg, either by varnishing a part of its surface or by exposing it to a too strong heat, or by tormenting it in some other manner.

Girl's Trap Catches Mouse.

At last a new way has been discovered for catching mice. And a Broadway show girl is the discoverer of the new device. It happens that she chanced across the scheme purely by accident. She purchased a dozen oysters in the shell and left them on the table in the kitchenetto of her apartment while she went to her boudoir to have a few hours with the rose box. When she returned to the kitchenetto she found firmly caught in the shell of one of the oysters a dead mouse. The oyster had been dragged fully a foot from the plato and traces on the table showed they had been a struggle. Mr. Mouse had ventured into the oyster when he opened his shell to get some air, head first, and Mr. Oyster just clamped together like a vice and crushed the unfortunate rodent. Since then every show girl is leaving oysters in all parts of their apartments.

In Gwalior City.

The state of Gwalior, in central India, is one of the wealthiest and most progressive districts in the great eastern empire. Gwalior City, the state capital, has fine public buildings and parks. The maharaja's palace is larger and more ornate than the official residence of the president of the United States. The furnishings are magnificent. At official banquets a most ingenious American electrical device of silver is used for passing around the after-dinner coffee, cordials and cigars. This is in the form of a miniture locomotive and train of cars, which, operating from an electric battery and running over a diminutive track laid along the table, is so constructed that it automatically stops before each guest.

Witty Reply.

Lord Lyons, the ambassador, was not what one would call a witty man, but there is one good story told of him showing that he could make an apt reply on occasion.

One of his friends, Augustus Craven, was intensely mysterious in manner, and once on meeting him in London Lord Lyons asked if his wife were with him.

It happened that Mrs. Craven was staying with Lady Cowper at Wrexham, and Mr. Craven replied in his slow, mysterious way:

"She is at Wrexham."

"Requiescat in pace!" replied Lord Lyons, with equal solemnity.

Nations of the World Have Never Been Able to Agree on Any One Principal Movement.

The men and women of races spread all over the world have shown a marvelous skill and patience in imparting rhythm and music to the most unlikely, the most rebellious regions of the body, all wrought by desire into potent and dazzling images. To the vigorous races of northern Europe in their cold, damp climate, dancing comes naturally to dancing of the legs, so naturally that the English poet, as a matter of course, assumes that the dance of Salome was a "twinkling of the feet." But on the opposite side of the world, in Japan and notably in Java and Madagascar, dancing may be exclusively dancing of the arms and hands, in some South Sea islands even of the hands and fingers alone. Dancing may even be carried on in the seated posture, as occurs in Fiji in a dance connected with the preparation of the sacred drink, ava. In some districts of southern Tunisia dancing, again, is dancing of the hair, and all night long, till they perhaps fall exhausted, the marriage girls will move their heads to the rhythm of a song, maintaining their hair in perpetual balance and sway. Elsewhere, notably in Africa, but also sometimes in Polynesia, as well as in the dances that had established themselves in ancient Rome, dancing is dancing of the body, with vibratory or rotatory movements of breasts or flanks.—Havelock Ellis, in the Atlantic.

SUGAR FROM SAWDUST.

In the course of a paper read before the London Royal Society of Arts, M. Zimmerman described a process by which sugar might be manufactured from sawdust. In its natural state, he pointed out, wood contains no sugar, but when sawdust has been subjected in closed retorts to digestion with a weak sulphurous acid solution under pressure of six to seven atmospheres, a very remarkable transmutation takes place, as much as 25 per cent. of the material being converted into sugar. In this M. Zimmerman claims that we have a valuable feeding stuff for horses, cattle and sheep.

"WALK A BLOCK AND SAVE A DOLLAR"

How "Vee-ah" Rules.

Lexington, Ky., April 29.—Phil T. Chinn, who left this week for New York, where he will sail for France, and who recently returned from Juarez, while in Lexington related several stories of his experiences in that revolution-ridden country, which show the manner of a man Gen. Villa is.

While in Juarez Chinn made the acquaintance of the rebel leader and became quite intimate with him. He told a story here which illustrates how the bandit general rules with an iron hand and how promptly he deals with offenders.

At the time Mr. Cain was in Juarez a large number of rebel soldiers were in and around the town, and these frequently became intoxicated. Strict orders were issued by Villa to the saloonkeepers not to sell the soldiers intoxicants, but later the violation of the order became flagrant, and many of the soldiers were found in the streets in a drunken condition.

By order of the rebel chief the drunken soldiers were arrested and placed under guard. They were forced to tell where they obtained the intoxicants, which resulted in the arrest of twenty-eight saloonkeepers. Instead of being permitted to go on with their business, these twenty-eight were taken out and promptly shot to death by Villa's orders. Mr. Chinn received an invitation from the rebel leader to attend the execution, but declined to be a witness to the slaughter.

APPEAL OF THE PASTORS

For General Observance of The Great Sunday School Day.

NEXT SUNDAY MAY THIRD.

An Attempt To Get 1,000,000 To Attend In Kentucky.

The Pastors' Association has made this appeal in reference to Sunday School Day and general attendance at all church services for the coming Sunday, May 3.

Believing that good results come from every special effort put forth in trying to get people to attend church, the Pastors' Association on yesterday agreed to push the interest throughout our city for the general attendance day next Sunday. We therefore ask that the membership of our various churches join us in a most hearty co-operation from now until Sunday morning, even up to the hour of going to Sunday School, and let's have the largest per cent of people in our Sunday Schools of any city in the state of Kentucky. The request has been sent out by the International Sunday School Committee and repeated by the governors of some of the states. Our own chief executive has issued a proclamation that the state of Kentucky show up one million, but why not let us do our part to make it two million?

This is not an experiment for the sake of idle curiosity, but in all earnestness and devotion we want to see the largest attendance in our Sunday Schools and at the preaching hours of the day that was ever known in our city. Once more we ask you, one and all, to help us make this the best attendance at all church services that was ever known in our city. We believe it is worth while to make the effort. So get ready for Sunday morning and come and bring all the family. "O worship the Lord in beauty of holiness; fear before Him all the earth." Ps.

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Heb.

The Pastors' Association.

The May Strand Magazine.

The May Strand Magazine is rich in fiction—the stories being by such well-known writers as W. B. Maxwell, Austin Philips, Edward Cecil, Irvin Trivene, May Edington, Armgard Barclay and others. Edmund Payne, the English comedian, relates some amusing "Experiences," while Arthur J. Ireland gives a vivid account—illustrated with unique photographs—of Captain Spelterini's remarkable ballooning experiences. Captain Spelterini has made 500 balloon journeys (during which time he carried 1,290 passengers and never lost one), crossed the Alps ten times, flown over Vesuvius twice (while it was in full eruption) and made ascents to tremendous altitudes in Russia, Germany, France, Italy, Turkey, Egypt, South Africa and other countries. Henry E. Dudeney writes about Jose Capablanca, the latest chess genius, and W. Phillips relates some striking stories from real life in his "Comedy and Tragedy in the Children's Court." "What you can do with one hat" should make a strong appeal to women with artistic tastes but slim purses. The number is excellently illustrated throughout.

Feminism a Peril To The Home, Says New York Leader.

declared. "I don't wonder that many of the suffragists feel that they have shouldered a tremendous responsibility."

"People often say that woman is the domesticated animal. She isn't. It's man who is most domesticated. He loves his home, and his club is simply a survival of early days. Of course now and then he likes to escape from the home circle and go back to his native jungle."

Mrs. Burton said that the women of this country were sending their girls to college to make feminists out of them. She said there were 52,000 girls in American colleges and universities who are preparing to join in the revolution which, she asserted, is sure to follow the feminist movement.

The speaker criticized some of the leading suffragists for their political and personal notions and ended by declaring that after listening to their "votes for women" arguments the only one she had ever heard that sounded sincere was that suffragists wanted to vote because it would add to their dignity.

"I think some women do feel so undignified that the vote would increase their sense of dignity," she said. "It is a presumption on the part of these women to say that because men vote they are happier. If you took 500 women and the same number of men and then checked off their happinesses and unhappinesses you would find that the women had the greatest number of happinesses. Only most of them don't know it."

Vera Cruz In 1847.

(New York World.)

The taking of Vera Cruz by American troops sixty-seven years ago was a different matter.

Santa Anna had abundant notice of the danger of his chief seaport, and it was garrisoned by a fairly strong force. At the close of 1845, the American army had consisted of but 7,882 men. Part of these had to be retained as Indian police, but those who could be spared formed the nucleus of Taylor's little army. The Polk administration, for political reasons, disliked to support either Taylor or Scott too zealously, but as between the two favored Taylor at first because he was unambitious.

Scott's army of 12,000 was made up in part of men drawn from Taylor's command, including most of the veteran officers, and in part of volunteers sailing from New York, nearly all recruits. Both from the mouth of the Rio Grande and from New York many sailing ships were used as transports, and some of the troops were on sea for comfortless weeks before landing. This was begun near Vera Cruz March 9, but not until thirteen days later was the investment of the city with trenches and field guns complete.

The bombardment from all directions, Commodore Perry assisting from the water side with the heavy guns of the fleet, was then conducted with greater vigor for four days, at the end of which time the foreign Consuls prevailed with the Mexicans to suspend hostilities, and on March 29 the city was formally surrendered. Twenty days had thus been consumed, besides the long months of preparation and the slow voyage of the transports.

But once headed for Mexico City, Scott's progress was a model for military students in its celerity.

Bryan Versus Roosevelt in 1916?

In the May American Magazine Ray Stannard Baker, the famous journalist, writes an interesting article about Woodrow Wilson in which he compares him with Roosevelt and Taft, explains the reasons for his extraordinary success, and gives an excellent statement of the progress that he has made.

With respect to the political prospects for 1916 Mr. Baker says:

"I have been talking thus far about thinkers. I wish now to descend from this rarified atmosphere and, while still speaking of Mr. Wilson, deal for a moment in that popular Washington beverage known as 'dope'."

"Dope" is edging its way irresistibly into our language. I even find it set down soberly ('slang, Am.') in my new Standard Dictionary. It may be used both as a noun and as a verb. It fills a long-felt want; it is a convenient word to express those viscous and gummy cerebrations that stop this side of thought. 'Dope' is peculiarly relished at Washington. They swallow any quantity there without blinking; they even make punches of it and serve it to the diplomatic corps. It has a somewhat gentler soporific than purple lemonade, it induces a slight itching at the apex of the cranium, and causes hardened drinkers to lay one thumb on the tip of the nose and wriggle the lesser digits.

"I preface the remarks which follow concerning the Presidential campaign of 1916 in this learned manner that they may not be taken too seriously.

'Bryan versus Roosevelt in 1916: this is the 'dope' which is now being 'doped out' in Washington.'

"Why Bryan? Mr. Wilson has shown an extraordinary loyalty in carrying out the provisions in the platform of the Baltimore Convention. That platform contains a plank favoring a single presidential term and pledging the candidate of the convention of this principle. Mr. Wilson will therefore not be a candidate in 1916. (Anyhow, his health will not permit it!) Who, then, is the only remaining candidate who can lead his party? William J. Bryan.

"Why Roosevelt? The Republican party will either swallow the Progressive party or the Progressive party will swallow the Republican party—the prediction varying according as your orator happens to be a Republican or a Progressive, and in either event Theodore Roosevelt, as heretofore, is the man of destiny.

Has anyone discerned anywhere a flat-footed statement on the part of Mr. Roosevelt that he will not be a candidate in 1916 for either the Progressive or Republican party or both? Well, then! Therefore according to 'dope' the battle will be between Mr. Bryan and Mr. Roosevelt and may the best man win!"

Colored Citizens Hear Lecture on Love and Law.

Between 400 and 500 colored citizens heard a lecture by C. W. Meriwether, of Hopkinsville, at Wesley Chapel, C. M. E. Church, in this city, Sunday afternoon on "Love, Law and Habit." The speaker is a lawyer and preacher, noted for his interest and efforts to elevate the ideals of his race. His auditors yesterday gave him the closest attention. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Colored Ministerial Alliance of Clarksville, and it is believed will bear good results. Many of the intelligent ones who heard it expressed themselves as being impressed and pleased with what they heard.—Clarksville Leaf-Chronicle.

Opelousas, La., April 27.—"Guilty without capital punishment," was the verdict returned by the jury here today in district court in the trial of W. C. Walters, itinerant tinker, charged with kidnapping five-year-old Robert Dunbar. Under the laws of Louisiana the verdict is equivalent to life imprisonment.

The verdict legally determines the identity of the boy taken from Walters at the time of his arrest and legally clears a mystery that presented many unusual phases, including the ability of a mother to identify her own son. It means that the youth claimed as their son will remain in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Dunbar here, where he has been since the arrest of Walters more than a year ago, and that Julia Anderson, now ill in a New Orleans hospital, was mistaken when she testified at the trial that the boy was her own.

The finding of the jury does not end the litigation. Counsel for Walters have announced that if the usual motion for a new trial is overruled they will appeal to the supreme court of the state.

Walters was arrested April 20, 1913, nearly eight months after Robert Dunbar disappeared from a fishing camp on the banks of Lake Swayze. At the time of his arrest he was accompanied by a boy who Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Dunbar identified as their lost child but who Walters claimed was Bruce Anderson, illegitimate son of Julia Anderson. He claimed the woman entrusted the boy to his care, and she later identified him as her son.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Dunbar returned to Opelousas with the boy after the arrest of Walters, and the town turned out to welcome them. Public receptions and a parade were features of the home coming.

So much doubt existed as to the identity of the boy taken from the tinker that Governor Brewer of Mississippi refused to honor the requisition of the governor of Louisiana for the return of Walters to that state until he had held a test.

Worth Weight In Gold.

Abingdon, Va.—Mrs. Jennie McCall, of this place, says, "I had been troubled with female complaints, for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house, for a long time. I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." This is a high estimate on a plain, herb medicine, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering. Cardui has helped others. Why not you? Try it. Your druggist sells it, in $1 bottles.

MEN WHO ONCE WERE POOR

Some Dislike to Be Reminded of Their Early Struggles for Success.

It is said that the late Lord Strathcona was not fond of recalling his early years. In this respect he differed from his wife, says a writer in the Boston Herald. Once when he was finding fault with a washerwoman who had been careless with a dress shirt, Lady Strathcona called out: "Donald Smith, I remember the day when you never wore a shirt that I had not made and washed and ironed myself."

Who is the great snob, the man that is ashamed of the years when he was poor and struggling, or the man who is always boasting of them? We all know the man who came to the city with only $5 in his pocket "and NOW." Years ago the president of the railroad company was never weary of saying that he began life as a winter boy and worked his way up. Now the president often assists in watering the stock. What has become of those queer, old-fashioned waterpots with the little rack for two or three glasses? There was no fear of death-bringing microbes then and appendicitis was commonly known as inflammation of the bowels. In those days the popcorn vendor drove a roaring trade in the train. And did the man that cried "Sponge and jelly cake" all the way from New York to Springfield leave no descendant?

George H. Boughton, the painter of puritan maidens, was aided in his youth by brother who kept a hat, cap and fur shop in Albany, N. Y. After the painter was famous a dinner was given in his honor and some Albanian, full of enthusiasm, dwelt on the guest's early poverty much to his annoyance. At last the painter cried out: "Don't rub it in so. I wasn't as poor as all that."

WANTED HUSBAND TO LOAF

Only Then Was He Agreeable. Testified Wife—Sought Divorce From Her Silent Spouse.

We read of him in three places in the dispatches of the day. The first case was where a man kissed his wife against her will, which made her so mad that she had him arrested for assault and battery, and the court sentenced him to thirty days in jail.

Next case was where a woman had her husband arrested for getting drunk and abusing her. When before the court, here is what she said:

"My man's a fine man when he's sober. The trouble is he earns money and spends it on liquor. The only time he's behaved himself was when he wasn't working and got no money. I have an income and can support the family. I wish you'd make him quit work."

"All right," said the judge. And he sentenced the husband not to work for thirty days.

The third case was a suit for divorce, where the wife charged that her husband would not speak to her.

He would eat his meals without a word, then sit down with a paper and read without looking at her or speaking to her. So it has been going on for a long time. Of course the court granted the wife a divorce. Having a silent, sour husband around is intolerable.—Ohio State Journal.

Torment of Cold.

I thank heaven that I know what it is to be cold, to be cold from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, to be cold from the cuticle to the heart, and from the heart to the soul; I thank heaven for it, because, knowing this, I have a new revelation of the possibility of suffering, and I am able to find a paradise in a common wood fire.

Knowing this, I declare to you there is not a more pathetic sight in the world than a poor man who is thoroughly cold from week to week. It is the refinement of torture.

It does not gnaw like hunger; which presently becomes a sort of insanity and relieves itself; it is a dead, unfeeling, icy torment. I used to see men in the army whose silent endurance of cold brought more tears to my eyes than all the hunger and all the wounds.—Sidney Lanier.

Big Money.

We have spoken of small coins, but what of large ones? The record, both for size and value, must surely be held by one described by Roger Ascham. It was specially made as a gift from the inhabitants of Tyrol to the Emperor Maximilian, and was of the size of a "great Suffolk cheese" and as heavy as two men could bear. Over 6,000 guineas (about £1,200 English) had gone to the making of it, and it was duly stamped with the arms of the emperor, and on the other side with his wife's face "most lively printed." This, however, was a freak. The largest coin ever in circulation was probably the old English £5 piece.—Loudon Chronicle.

Two Unusual Professions.

One of the most unusual professions in existence is that of the man with a knowledge of many languages who spends a great part of his time in looking through reference books in order to discover errors, the publishers paying him for every inaccuracy disclosed. But this is by no means the queerest trade in existence. Even more out of the way is the calling, whose existence has just made itself known in the courts, of supplying dog's teeth to the Pacific Islanders. The latter use them as currency.

CAT AND RAT EQUAL PESTS

Former Especially Have Wrought Havoc Among the Smaller Native Animals of Australia.

In the Monte Bello Islands domestic cats have most unfortunately been introduced, which do much damage amongst the wallabies, and have exterminated the bandicoot. The cats thrive exceedingly wherever they are introduced, growing to great size. They soon become wild and cunning, and breed fast. It may be safely said that these animals are doing more damage than anything else to the native fauna of the Australian region; indeed, the same remarks apply to the greater part of the world. Cats are carried almost universally on small trading ships, with the idea that they keep down rats. When they become too numerous or otherwise objectionable, they are simply marooned, for to kill a cat is considered among the sailors as most unlucky.

The black rat is another introduced species which does great harm. The animal is found universally over the Monte Bello group, even on the small outlying islets, which are never visited, on which it occurs most abundantly. Its presence is attributed to a schooner which was wrecked some twelve years ago, for it is well known that this rat is a good swimmer. It is curious to find that this animal, which is now so rare in its native countries as to be looked upon as a great curiosity, should usually be one of the first species to populate new lands where it is comparatively free from competition. Driven from all civilized countries by the brown rat, it has taken to the sea, being better adapted for a life on board ship than its otherwise victorious rival.—P. D. Montague in Geographical Journal.

APT DESCRIPTION OF FLATS

Somewhat Mystifying to the Stranger in New York, but Are Entirely Appropriate.

Some of the terms used to describe apartments are mystifying to the uninitiated, declares the New York Sun. For instance, "railroad flat" conveys little idea to the novice until it is explained that this special type of apartment has no private hall. The back door and the front door both open into the public hall, and the rooms follow one after the other, like cars on a railroad train, which accounts for the expression railroad flat.

A "box flat" is one degree up the scale, for here, while there is no entire length of private hall, there is a sufficient slice taken from the bedrooms so that one may walk from the parlor to the dining room without crossing the two intermediate bedrooms. The tiny hall is boxed in, hence the name box flat.

A "walk up" speaks for itself and is easily translated into non-elevator flat. As a matter of fact, many of the most desirable of the older apartment houses come under the head of "walk ups."

A "push the button" is still another type which may apply to any of the others. It is never misleading, as it graphically describes its mode of entrance.

All these fine points of distinction can be gleaned from a day's apartment hunting.

Pie, the National Dish.

Three years ago a pie-eating contest was held for the championship of New Jersey, relates the London Chronicle. In the United States pie is a national dish, and the variety with which the competitors had to struggle consisted of a layer of pastry a quarter of an inch thick, spread with canned fruit, the average weight being half a pound. According to the report of a local journal, "and enthusiasm, thirty-five young men, trained to the minute, entered the contest for the championship. The state record of twenty-six pies in half an hour fell during the battle. Walter Tappin of Tilsomfield, N. J., was the winner. He managed to put himself on the outside of twenty-seven pies in the allotted time. For this he received the "championship belt." It should have been an elastic one.

Knowing this, I declare to you there is not a more pathetic sight in the world than a poor man who is thoroughly cold from week to week. It is the refinement of torture.

It does not gnaw like hunger; which presently becomes a sort of insanity and relieves itself; it is a dead, unfeeling, icy torment. I used to see men in the army whose silent endurance of cold brought more tears to my eyes than all the hunger and all the wounds.—Sidney Lanier.

HELD THAT DOG IS PROPERTY

Tennessee Court in its Decision Reverses Rulings That Have Been Made on the Subject.

An action at law in Tennessee, involving the seizure and sale at public auction of two coon dogs for debt has brought from the supreme court of the state, a ruling that a dog is property, although, as the report goes on to say, previous rulings have been to the contrary. If there is any other part of the globe that denies to the dog the manifest right to be rated as property the error should promptly be corrected. In this instance the dogs were all the earthly treasures a debtor possessed, except the clothes on his back. Otherwise, of course, the sheriff would never have levied on them. The hardest-hearted officer of the law would not deprive a man of his dog if anything else could be found to take away. The thief in the night, who occasionally lifts one, is not a fit associate for a yeggman. There is another aspect of the matter, which, in fact, has been a bone of legal contention from very ancient times. As the supreme court of one state observed: "It bears a tinge of the ridiculous to contend that, however many and however valuable dogs a man may own, he cannot be made to pay his debts if he will only invest his money in dogs." That a dog is not property has usually been argued on the ground either that from its ancestry it remains a wild animal in such sense as not to be a leivable possession, or that an animal which is not good to eat has no intrinsic value.

HAD TO RUN HUSBAND, TOO

Burden on Mistress of Farm Was Not Lessened by the Presence of Hubby.

A traveler was taking his dinner one day at a mountain farmhouse on the headwaters of the Cumberland river, and the lady of the house, who had four children playing around the front of the establishment, was inclined to reproach at her bad luck in having so much work to do.

"I run this here whole farm," she said, in a tone which indicated that she was ready to resign.

"How many acres have you?" the traveler inquired.

"A hundred and forty; twenty in wheat, sixty in corn, ten in medder an' pastur, an' the balance scatterin' an' woods."

"Got any stock?"

"Ten head uv cattle, two cows, six hogs and work critters for the place."

"And you run the whole business?"

"Indeed I do; every hide an' hair uv it," she sighed.

"But you have hired help?"

"In course, but 'taint hired help that takes the load offen a body." There was philosophy in that statement, and the traveler paused a minute.

"Haven't you got a husband?" he next asked, with a good deal of sympathy.

"Yes," she responded, very slowly, "but I have to run him, too."

Swordsmen of the Sea.

The swordsmen of the sea are the sawfishes, spearfishes, sailfishes, swordfishes and the narwhal, with its spirally twisted straight tusks. Sawfishes inhabit the warmer seas, while the narwhal is a creature of the Arctic. The tusk of the narwhal is hollow nearly to the point and is spirally grooved. It uses its tusk as a weapon of defense and to plunge through the ice to breathe, the narwhal being a cetacean. Sometimes when a boat has been caught in the ice great damage has been inflicted by the inquisitiveness or blundering of this great creature, that sometimes reaches a length of 15 feet, with a tusk of from six to ten feet in length. As a rule, however, the narwhal uses its tusk for killing fish for food. In the castle of Rosenberg the kings of Denmark have long possessed a magnificient throne made of tusks of this cetacean. These tusks are harder and whiter than ivory.

Visitor Heard All.

Finances were in a very low condition when Juliet received a surprise visit from her friend, Farnegie.

"You will stay to dinner, won't you?" she said.

"Why, yes; I would like it very much if you will have me."

Juliet went into the kitchen to give her orders to her maid. She forgot that her visitor could hear every word—or perhaps she didn't forget. Anyhow, this conversation came to his ears:

"Mary, I want you to get up a delicious little dinner. Oyster cocktail, fish—brook trout if you can get it; a broiler or a spring turkey—"

"Yes, mm'm; and I had better tell the man that your banker is visiting you or else he'll be putting me off with pork chops."

Right to Bear Arms.

The words from Article II, amendments to the Constitution of the United States, "A well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free people, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed," evidently have a community meaning; but they also carry along with them the right of the individual to safeguard himself and his house by keeping himself armed with the necessary means of defense. The law against carrying concealed weapons, now on the statute books of most of the states, is a matter quite foreign to the broad principles of the right of keeping and bearing arms.

CHANGE WITH THE YEARS

Good Things That Appaled to Boyhood Lose Their Savor to Those of Advancing Age.

"The old story of the little boy who, when asked how he knew when he had enough, replied, 'When things what was good begins to taste bad, then I know I have had enough,' was brought forcibly to my mind when I visited my father in Rochester, N. Y.," said Robert Oliver of Albemarle county, Virginia, at the Shoreham. "My father is an Englishman, as I am, by birth, and the old gentleman has labored under the delusion that everything that is grown in the tight little island is better than anything that can be produced in this country."

"Among other delusions enjoyed by the old gentleman is that there is no apple on earth like the Ripston pippin, which was his favorite when a boy, but I happen to know that the Ripston pippin is identical with the Albemarle pippin of our country. So I shipped a barrel of these Virginia apples to my father, just before going to visit him. The apples arrived the same day I did, and when they were opened his delight was pleasant to see. He selected a fine specimen, and remarked that that was the real Ripston. He ate a part of it, but did not seem to be over-enthusiastic, and when I pressed him to take another, he admitted that it was probable his taste had changed, and that the apple of fifty years ago might be no better than the nippie of today, but that his digestive organs or his palate had probably altered.

"I know he was right, for, remembering my early days, I recalled that not long ago I called upon my mother to make a pudding that was my extreme delight when I was thirteen. She made it, and it is likely it was just the same as she used to make when I was a boy. But it didn't taste the same. I think I must have been like the little boy. As we grow older we are prone to believe that the things of the present are not like the things of former days. William Winter was wont to prate about all the good actors being dead. But I assume that we are living in times just as good as when we were boys, although we didn't know it."—Washington Post.

New Food for Cattle.

Germany is evolving an ever-increasing number of potato products, and thus rapidly solving the problem of disposing of the once enormous surplus of this crop. A number of establishments in that country are now turning out quantities of dried potatoes, in various forms, for use in feeding cattle. According to a recent costal report, dried potatoes do not cause the forms of sickness that result from a diet of raw potatoes. Moreover, raw potatoes can be preserved for only limited time, while to boil the potatoes would impose upon the stock raiser more expense than the circumstances justify. Official tests have proved that the one-third of strengthening food generally given to horses in the form of grain could be replaced by dried potatoes, and such animals would be kept in excellent condition.—Scientific American.

United States and German Navies.

The records of 1911, the latest available, show that the German navy consisted of 325 craft of all kinds, of which the first-class battleships numbered 28; second-class 9; first-class cruisers, 13; destroyers, 116; torpedo boats, 70; submarines, 14. Total officers and men of the line, 35,500. The figures for the United States for the same date are: Total craft, 204; first-class battleships, 24; second-class, 9; first-class cruisers, 15; destroyers, 40; torpedo boats, 34; submarines, 40; officers and men of the line, 51,000.

Criticism Resented.

John Ruskin, the English art critic, once criticized in his fearless way a picture of a well known painter, who was very much grieved at the effect. Later, on hearing of the sorrow he had caused, he wrote to the artist that he regretted he could not speak more favorably of the picture, but hoped it would make no difference in their friendship. The artist, it is said, wrote in reply the following note: "Dear Ruskin: Next time I meet you I shall knock you down, but I hope it will make no difference in our friendship."

MEN IN MIND IN HOPKINSVILLE

People of Prominence In The Pearl City of The Penny-royal.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH NO. 2.

George D. Dalton, Head of The Dalton Brothers Brick Company.

In the early part of the year 1882 there came from Springfield, Tenn., a family destined to have much to do with the commercial up-building of Hopkinsville. The father was S. W. Dalton and two of the sons had reached manhood and, like their father and grandfather, were brickmasons and brick manufacturers. The elder of these sons was Geo. D. Dalton and together with his brother, T. Monroe Dalton, he formed the business firm of Dalton Bros., which remained unchanged for 29 years, and until the business was incorporated in

GEORGE D. DALTON.

1911. Fortune favored the young men. They had been here only a few months when the great fire of 1882 destroyed nine squares in the business section of the city and they at once found themselves with more work than they could do. Almost the whole town had to be rebuilt with brick houses and they were the only brick manufacturers in the city. They took hold of the problem energetically and increased their business to the full extent of all the capital they could command and it became and established success from the outset. They began by making probably 500,000 brick a year by hand, but now they turn out 4,000,000 a year made by improved machinery and dried under shelter. They confine themselves to making the best quality of machine-made brick, but handle all kinds of pressed brick when their building operations demand the finer grades.

With but few exceptions, the Daltons have built the business blocks of Hopkinsville as they are to-day. They have built several wings to the Western State Hospital, the various public school buildings of the city, McLean College, and more recently erected the magnificent new High School Building, the finest of its kind in Kentucky.

The business is steadily growing and they now ship a great portion of the output of their kilns to adjoining towns and continue to do a general contracting in brick work construction all over the country.

Geo. D. Dalton, President of the Dalton Bros. Brick Co., was born in Robertson county, Tenn., near Barren Plains, June 19, 1861. He was 21 years old when he came to Hopkinsville. He easily ranks among the prominent and successful business men of Greater Hopkinsville and his stability of character and unflinching integrity have become proverbial. Kind hearted, generous and considerate, he never has had any labor troubles with the 100 or more men in his employ and his dealings with the public have always been fair, straightforward and reliable. Mr. Dalton several years ago served for ten years as a member of the city council and made an honest and faithful official. He is a deacon in the First Baptist church, of which he has been a lifelong member. He lives in a handsome home on East Seventh street and maintains a downtown office in the Dalton office building, on the corner of Seventh and Virginia streets.

WHAT PROF. WILSON WROTE OF OUR VICTORIES IN MEXICO.

In Woodrow Wilson's textbook, "Division and Reunion," written in 1892, when he was president of Princeton university, he described the war of 1846 to 1848 with Mexico. What the historian and scholar had to say then has a peculiar interest in view of the author's attitude now. He tells how Taylor took Monterey, now the scene of battle between Mexican factions, and of the capture of the City of Mexico. The Mexicans he describes as "a race full of courage, spirit and subtlety." An extract from the book follows:

"Congress accepted the assertion that Mexico had begun war, as convenient, whether true or not, and provided for the expenses of the conflict as for any necessity. A formal declaration of war was resolved upon on May 13, 1846, before the news of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma had reached Washington, and the president was authorized to call for 50,000 volunteers for one year."

Victory at Buena Vista.

"September 19 to 23 the Americans, by slow and stubborn fighting, took the strongly placed and heavily fortified city of Monterey, some 19 miles south of the Rio Grande. February 22 and 23, 1847, Santa Anna, with a force probably numbering at least 12,000 men, attacked Taylor's force, which then numbered 5,200, on the broken plain of Buena Vista, but, failing to gain any advantage, withdrew to the defense of his capital, the City of Mexico. He had thought to destroy Taylor while he was weak; for in November, 1846, Gen. Winfield Scott had been appointed to the chief command in Mexico, to which his military rank entitled him, and January had brought a call for the greater part of Taylor's troops to assist the commander-in-chief in an invasion of Mexico from Vera Cruz, on the coast. The operations in the north ended with the battle of Buena Vista.

"Gen. Scott began his operations with a force of about 12,000 men. He had chosen a hard road to the Mexican capital, but the dogged valor and alert sagacity of his men made everything possible. The fleet which carried his troops came to anchor near Vera Cruz on March 7, 1847, and on the 27th of the same month Vera Cruz had surrendered, having been taken without great difficulty.

Advance on City of Mexico.

"In the middle of April began the march of 200 miles northwestward to the City of Mexico. On the 18th Scott forced the rough mountain pass of Cerro Gordo. On August 10, after a delay caused by fruitless negotiations for peace, the City of Mexico was in sight from the heights of the Rio Frio mountains. Selecting the weaker side of the city, which lay amid a network of defenses and surrounded on all sides by marshy ground, which could be crossed only on causeways, the Americans slowly by dint of heroic courage and patience, drove the Mexicans from one portion of the defense to another until finally the great fortress of Chapultepec was taken by storm (September 13) and the city captured.

"The occupation was complete by the 15th, and there was no further resistance anywhere by the Mexicans. At every point the American troops had fought against heavy odds. They were most of them only volunteers, and they had fought against a race full of courage, spirit and subtlety. Their success was due to their moral qualities—to their steady pluck and self-confidence, their cool intelligence, their indomitable purpose, their equal endowments of patience and dash."

ODD FELLOWS OPEN SESSION

INVESTIGATION IN MAYFIELD

In Honor of Ninety-sixth Anniversary of Establishment of Order.

And Former Tax Collector Held To Be Nearly $9000 Short.

The entertainment given Monday night by the Odd Fellows lodge in celebration of the ninety-sixth anniversary of the establishment of the order was greatly enjoyed by a very large crowd. The hall was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Several informal speeches were made by members of the lodge here and of the lodge at Crofton, and there were musical numbers, both vocal and instrumental, which added much to the pleasure of the meeting. There were also readings which were beautifully rendered, each number receiving hearty applause. The program was excellently rendered throughout, in fact, and the visitors were delighted with their entertainment.

Mr. L. E. Adwell was master of ceremonies.

RAPID GROWTH

Of The Up-To-Date Dairy of C. R. Atkins.

C. R. Atkins has recently made a number of important improvements at his dairy near the city designed to put the entire plant on an up-to-date basis so far as sanitation, convenience and system are concerned.

The stock barns are made scrupulously neat and sanitary. The cows are not allowed to remain in the milking barn except during milking time and the floors are kept as neat as possible. They are provided with city water and flushing arrangements and a sterilizing outfit. Every tub, pail, strainer and can is thoroughly sterilized before and after using.

The milk is crated in steel crates and the bottles packed in crushed ice when delivered. Nothing is left undone to make the service complete. Mr. Atkins began business with 8 cows only 14 months ago, but is now milking 25 cows and is unable to keep up with his orders.

VICK'S Croup and Pneumonia SALVE "JUST RUB IT ON"

In January the City Council employed H. C. Albritton and Wiltz Headles, two capable expert accountants, to investigate the accounts of the City Clerk, Ed Bolinger, and the City Tax Collectors, T. L. McNutt and W. L. McGehee, and perhaps others.

These accountants have been at work ever since, until about a week ago, investigating the standing of these officials with the city. After making all deductions and everything, W. L. McGehee was found behind $415.17, which he promptly paid.

Ed Bolinger, City Clerk, was also found indebted to the city $557.28, which he also paid promptly.

These errors, which were clerical, were at once acknowledged by the officials and settlements were made accordingly.

These accountants made their report Monday night, regarding the investigation of the city, with T. L. McNutt, who was City Tax Collector during the years, 1906 '07, '08 and '09, and according to this report he owes the city $8,737.77.

He claims that when he produces all of his papers that this will be materially reduced and that if he is found to be indebted to the city he will promptly pay what he owes.

This investigation has cost the city about $600.—Mayfield Messenger.

The Rat is Man's Worst Enemy

Farm and Fireside says:

"A writer in the 'Technical World Magazine' makes the statement on what seems to be authority that there are five rats for every human being in the United States, or 500,000,000 rats. They all eat, and what they eat is less than what they destroy. On a basis of weight, allowing two pounds to the rat and a hundred pounds to the average person, the rats weigh one tenth as much as the people; and without any allowance for waste by rats their maintenance costs us a tenth as much as our own food. The rat is the most destructive of all beasts. If any animal ever gets the upper hand of the human race on this earth it will be the rat. They are demons of cunning, and can live in any climate."

Kentucky Soldiers.

Among Kentucky officers now on the Texas-Mexican border, who already have been started to Vera Cruz or who may go at any hour, are the following: Second Lieutenant Simon Bolivar, Ninth infantry; Col. Joseph Garrard, commanding the Fifteenth cavalry at El Paso; Capt. Charles Morrow, Eighteenth infantry, nephew of Senator Bradley; First Lieutenant L. H. Legarde, Ninth infantry; Second Lieutenant Owsley.

Mrs. Ina Butler as next friend for Thomas Butler, a minor, has sued the Empire Coal Co. for $1150 damages, $100 for loss of time, $50 for doctor's bills and $1,000 for injuries sustained in an accident. The boy and a mule were being raised from the mine and the mule began to struggle and in trying to quiet the animal Butler fell out of the cage and had one hip dislocated, an arm broken and sustained other serious injuries. The cage was without railings or safeguards.
